

MOUNTAIN FARMER UP FOR BIGAMY.

Alleged He Had Wife When He Married Johanna
Brown.

BOTH WIVES TO FIGHT CASE

They Will Appear Against Him at the Hearing Before Squire Buttermore
Next Friday—Lotman Jumped Ball
But Returned and Surrendered.

After attempting to escape prosecution on charges of bigamy and adultery, C. L. Lotman, a farmer of Springfield township, became possessed with the idea that detectives were on his trail. He surrendered himself to Constable S. E. Nelson and was committed to jail after failing to furnish the $1,000 bail demanded by Justice of the Peace P. M. Buttermore. Lotman was to have been given a hearing last week but jumped his $150 bail. He traveled to various points but finally returned to this section. He called upon from Scotland this morning and was in touch with Constable Nelson. He was told to come to Connelville and surrender. He did so.

Serious charges are preferred against Lotman. It is alleged he married Johanna Brown several years ago while he has a wife and child living. To his alleged second wife he has had two children. It is said, Lotman denies he ever married Miss Brown, who is the daughter of John W. C. Brown, at present living in Connelville township, but a former well known resident of the West Side.

County Detective Frank McLaughlin made the information against Lotman some time ago. His arrest followed but he was discharged under nominal bail. He failed to appear for the hearing but with his apprehension at this time the hearing has been set for next Friday before Squire Buttermore.

Efforts will be made to have both wives present at the hearing to give evidence against Lotman. The first wife lives in West Virginia and the second wife is said to have married her. One son, it is said, was born to this union. Lotman is accused of deserting his first wife. He came to this section and began farming a tract of land in the mountainous part of the West Side.

Lotman denies marrying Johanna Brown, but for the past two years or more they have lived together as man and wife. The second Mrs. Lotman is prepared to establish the fact there was a marriage which would have been legal but for Lotman's first marital bond. Even if Lotman succeeds in proving that he did not marry Miss Brown, and the prosecution is not satisfied, he will not succeed in doing so, he will face a serious charge of adultery.

Lotman was taken to jail this morning by Constable S. E. Nelson and between now and the time set for the hearing the prosecution will endeavor to have the first wife come to Connelville to testify against her erring husband.

Postal Savings Promises to Be Quite Popular

Special to The Courier.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 12.—Reports are being received at the Postoffice Department from the postmasters in widely scattered sections of the country to the effect that constant inquiries are being made as to the time for the establishment of the new postal savings banks. Finding that the government is not yet ready, and will not be for some months, to take charge of their savings, the people are buying money orders payable to themselves in much larger quantities and amounts than ever before, the intention being to make deposit of them in the postal banks as soon as they are in operation.

In one town in the State of Washington the postmaster reports that at least $100,000 is being held in this way. Communities settled by foreigners are said to be particularly anxious to take advantage of the new Government banks, but practically every money order issued in the country reports a considerable increase during the last few months of the number of money orders made out in favor of the purchaser. If this condition continues it is safe to say that the postal savings banks, when they are opened for business, will start in with deposits of several million dollars.

The post office committee, charged with preparing regulations for the operation of the postal savings bank system, has sent agents throughout the country to examine the methods in force in savings banks, in order to appropriate their best features in the working of the new system.

Special to The Courier.

This was an action to recover two lots in Bellevue deeded by June Jacobs, aged 87, to the defendant. The plaintiff contended that it was the intention of her mother, Mrs. Jacobs, to leave them the property, and on this assumption, Jacobs built a house on one of the lots. The plaintiffs claimed undue influence was used by the defendant to secure a deed for the property.

The other handed down today directs that the defendant deed the lot upon which the house is erected to the plaintiffs and to pay the costs.

STRICT RULES

For Police Regarding Trespassers on Pennsylvania Railroad.

The police rules of the Pennsylvania railroad are becoming more stringent. Instructions have been issued to patrolmen that in the future crossing the tracks at any point except a public crossing will be considered a violation of the law and that it will be their duty to prohibit all such unnecessary traffic. In sections where engineers have taken advantage of spots along river divisions to erect camps on the opposite side of the tracks from the river, this new rule will effect such parties rather seriously. They have been warned against crossing the tracks.

The railroad men claim that such action is necessary for the maintenance of high-speed trains and the production in accidents.

LEVY AGGRESSIVE MAKING A SALE.

Words With Italian Follow and Both are Haled Before Burgess.

COSTS MERCHANT FIVE SPOT

Burgess Decides Levy Was Too Anxious to Make the Sale and Unjustly Abused Customer—Levy Says Italian Started It All.

J. Levy, a North Pittsburg street merchant, was fined $5 before Burgess Evans this morning for "aggressive salesmanship." The formal charge was disorderly conduct but it all grew out of Levy's efforts to make a larger sale to Guido Forlani, an Italian baker.

It all depends upon the point of view whether Levy was abusive towards his customer or only defended himself against insult and unwarranted assault. Burgess Evans was inclined to favor the Italian, for he was discharged from the Burgess' court. What view Squire W. P. Clark will take in the case when Forlani is given a hearing for assault and battery remains to be seen.

Forlani entered Levy's store shortly after 7 o'clock this morning to purchase some socks. He looked over some hats but they did not suit. Levy says Forlani was cheap, wanting a $1.50 or $2 hat for fifty cents. When Levy declined to make the sale Forlani is alleged to have sworn at him. Forlani says Levy started the swearing when he refused to buy any more goods.

After coming from the hat department, which is on the upper floor of the establishment, Forlani handed Levy $7 to pay for the socks. Levy sent a boy out for the change and during the lad's absence the melee occurred. Levy says Forlani hit him over the head with a shoe but the Italian could not recall that occurrence. Levy attempted to put Forlani out and the Italian started running up Pittsburg street with Levy, bleeding from a cut in the head, and several other merchants of the vicinity chasing after him. John Coffins and John J. Enos caught Forlani, who offered no resistance and who asked for protection from the oncoming horde.

Some claim Levy cut his head by banging it against the door while trying to put Forlani out. Levy says where the Italian hit him with the shoe.

The chase up Pittsburg had its humorous aspects. Levy was armed with a shoe in each hand, which he hurled at the fleeing Italian. One hit Forlani in the back. Half a dozen fellow countrymen of Levy's joined in the chase. Blood streamed down the merchant's face from the cut on his head.

Forlani was taken to the lockup. Coffins and Enos turning him over to Officer P. M. Ruhl. Ruhl went back for the socks and change which Forlani did not wait for. Levy was arrested later.

Levy admitted to Burgess Evans that he did Forlani he "looked like he slept on the coke pans," when the Italian showed him he had no socks on.

Each evidently rivaled the other in abusive epithets in the store. Burgess Evans decided Levy brought much of the trouble on himself and fined him $5. Forlani was held for the hearing before Squire Clark.

"You should have given the man his change after selling the socks and let him go out," the Burgess declared.

"But, Mr. Burgess, that would not have been good salesmanship. A good salesman should always try to sell a customer something more after he makes a purchase. If he didn't do that he wouldn't get any business at all."

The Burgess didn't agree with this method and assessed the fine. Levy left bowing his thanks to the Burgess for his favors.

PARIS TO MARK HOUSES OCCUPIED BY NAPOLEON.

Many Tablets Needed to Show Rise From Poverty.

Each of the houses in Paris where Napoleon Bonaparte dwelt when he was a young, struggling soldier is to be marked with a tablet suitably inscribed.

The wife of the author, who lived under the roof which is now his, will have to order these tablets by the hundreds. Dozens of Parisians will try to get as proudly as seriously.

"He who conquered Europe once lived under the roof which is mine now."

The fact is Napoleon accommodated his dwelling to his purse. When he first went to Paris he lived in the military school. There he had to climb 172 steps to his garret. A room scarcely large enough sheltered the future emperor for a time at 3 Quai Conti.

Then he took a small apartment on Rue de Noyers, only a few yards from the Tuileries palace, where he was to shine in all his glory.

In 1822 Napoleon moved to the Hotel Metz, on Rue du Mail, but the humblest apartment in the hotel was the best he could afford. At that period the man who was to topple thrones took his meals at a little cafe in Rue des Petits Peres, arranging to pay 20 cents a day.

Napoleon's next home was on Rue Montmartre. His slowly increasing income enabled him to rent a suite of three rooms there. One was occupied by his brother Louis, who was to become king of Holland; another by Juliet, whose wildest dreams could not have foreseen himself a marshal of France and Duke of Abrantes.

In 1796 Napoleon went to live on the more fashionable Rue de la Michodiere and from there to the Hotel Mirabeau, in the Impasse du Dauphin. The Hotel Colonnaud saw his last bachelor days, and when he married Josephine he bought a small house on Rue des Chantiers.

Other Sources of Revenue Show Increase For Treasury.
Net profits of $18,553,000 derived from the weekly state lotteries are a feature of the Italian treasury receipts for the fiscal year ended last June. This is a considerable advance on the gains of the preceding year. The Italian Socialists are anti-gamblers and want the lotteries abolished, but they are not likely to succeed in their abolition campaign, as all the northern, and especially the Neapolitans, are confirmed gamblers.

Other sources of revenue also show substantial increases, making the total collected $12,000,000 larger than the previous year. This does not include the additional 2 per cent duty which was imposed halfway through the previous year for the relief of Mesina and Reggio. This duty has yielded in eighteen months $4,344,205.

Every item of the Italian revenue is in a healthy state except the land tax, the diminution of which is explained by the concessions made to the districts affected by the great earthquake and the customs, which have had less corn and sugar passing through them in consequence of recent legislation. The financial statement closes with a balance to the good of $5,787,770.

TITLED WOMAN IS FLORIST.

Lady Angela Forbes Trade of Family.

Lady Angela Forbes is the latest recruit to the ranks of title shopkeepers in London. Her enterprise is a flower shop, where she personally waits on customers and sells them plants and blossoms at fancy prices. The little store is prettily fitted up, and the titled proprietress fits about among her wares wearing a blue apron and garden gloves. "My Shop" is the sign over the door.

Lady Angela is the third member of the family to go into trade. Her sister, the Duchess of Sutherland, has a shop in Bond street for the sale of the silver, pottery and metal work made by the Grange family, and Lady Warwick, her half sister, was in the millinery business in Bond street and later in Sloane street and now controls a horticultural school for girls.

Lord Rosslyn, the elder brother, was at one time editor of Scottish Life and a war correspondent in Ladysmith. He afterward adopted the stage as a profession.

BASEBALL WILL NEVER DIE.

Will Live in Heaven in Spiritual Form—Maybe.

"Baseball in Heaven" was the subject of a sermon preached by the Rev. C. Julian Tuttle, pastor of the Congregational church of Mattapoisett, Mass. He said in part:

"Heaven is but an evolution of this world. A Christian may love a ball game and, loving it, remain a Christian. Why, then, is it not safe to prophesy that even the game of baseball will have its place in some spiritual form in heaven?"

Heavy Traffic on Mexican Isthmus.
The British consul at Salina Cruz, the Pacific terminus of the Tehuantepec railway, says that the freight carried over the Mexican Isthmus route in 1909 reached nearly 1,000,000 tons.

Fuel Bill Is Heavy.
The United States government spends annually from $4,500,000 to $7,000,000 for fuel.

Words are like leaves, and where they most abound much fruit of sense beneath is rarely found.—Lope.

Dumont's Band at Shady Grove Next Sunday

Dumont's famous band of 30 pieces will give a concert Sunday afternoon and evening at Shady Grove park. Prof. Dumont was formerly with Sousa's Band and is a musician of great note. The Dumont Band has been rendering concerts at many of the large summer resorts for some time past and this is the first visit of the celebrated musicians in this section. The attraction promises to be one of the best ever secured by Robert S. Coyle, the park manager.

Powers elephants, which have been the attraction at the park for the past several weeks, will be at the park the remainder of the week. Their next engagement is at Pittsburgh.

ELECTION OFFICERS.

Of W. C. T. U. at the County Convention at Bellevue.

Election of officers for the ensuing year and delegates to the annual county convention of the W. C. T. U. will be held late in September at Bellevue. The convention will take place at the monthly meeting to be held next Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Carnegie Free Library.

Memorial services will also be held for Mrs. H. H. DeVoe, and Mrs. Elizabeth Lucas, deceased members of the Union. A large attendance is desired.

The Ideal Home.

We are just completing an ideal home for the man of limited means. It is a pretty cottage located on a 40x120 foot lot on the east side of Sycamore street, between Newmyer and Davidson avenues.

The outside appearance is exceptionally pretty and the seven rooms, bath and pantry, inside are of comfortable size and well arranged for the convenience of the particular housewife. The construction is stone foundation, first story stucco, second story shingles and the roof is slate. The cellar is cemented, house is wired for hot air heat, water and gas and is wired for electricity. The bath is fitted up complete. There are two porches, the front one is large and of a very attractive design. For terms, see Connelville Construction Company, 402 First National Bank Building.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our sincere and heartfelt thanks to our neighbors and friends for their kindness and assistance during the illness and at the time of the death of our dear wife and mother. We also wish to thank the Singers and those who contributed the beautiful floral offerings. Horace B. DeVoe, C. B. Hiles, Miss Pearl R. DeVoe, Miss Olive Avis DeVoe.

Flight Caused Death.

MONESSEN, Aug. 12.—Mrs. Bridget Kilroy, 65 years old, proprietress of the Kilroy hotel, died suddenly Tuesday night from shock and a paralytic stroke, believed to have been directly caused by fright from a light that occurred in the bar.

Every available inch of space is crammed with summer and early fall shipments (that could not be cancelled in time), the brands of which are synonymous with the best produced in America. And particularly now, under instructions of Mace & Co., to close out regardless of former prices, the Saville Salvage Co. will commence what is undoubtedly the largest sale they have ever conducted in the twenty-five years of their history, extending to everyman, woman and child in Fayette and adjoining counties an opportunity unequalled in remarkable and legitimate savings. For we tell you here, boldly and frankly, without fear of contradiction, that your utmost expectations will be surpassed; that in many instances 20c, 30c and 40c will have the full purchasing power of a dollar, and that our end and aim is to dispose of every dollar's worth of goods embraced in the three mammoth floors of Fayette county's biggest and best known department store. REV. LAMMING IS HONORED.

Scottdale Minister Elected
President of Priests' Total
Abstinence Society.

JOHN COLLINS GOT IN WRONG

When He Broke Into John H. Bunder's House at Youngwood—Three Arrested Charged With Taking a Revolver From the Eagles' Club.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTTDALL, Aug. 12.—Another distinguished temperance honor has come to Scottdale through the person of Rev. M. A. Lambing, pastor of St. John the Baptist Church. At the 10th annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America held in Boston when 50,000 people filled the streets of that city for the night parade, among the prominent delegates in line was Very Rev. M. A. Lambing, elected President of the Priests' Total Abstinence League of America.

Collins in Wrong.
John Collins got in wrong when he went up to Youngwood and entered the house occupied by John H. Bunder, who is working at the Hill House while Ed. O'Neil is away camping. Bunder has been a resident of Scottdale for some time, but lately had been living at Youngwood in a house owned by Mrs. Emma Harold in the Harford plan. It is said Collins borrowed half a dollar from Bunder and went to Youngwood where he broke out two panes in a window of Bunder's house and entered. Women in that neighborhood saw a man leave the house and knowing the family was away sent out an alarm. A chase of nearly a mile resulted, but Collins was finally caught. He denied taking anything when arraigned before D. P. Miller, but pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering and was held for court. Collins' motive for breaking in could not be learned.

Firemen at Carnegie.
The Scottdale Volunteer Fire Department got back from the convention at Carnegie last night and report having had one of the best conventions that they have yet attended. The Volunteer Fire Corps was one of the best in the line of parade and the department has every reason to feel proud of their musically inclined members. The big Otto show, which were here under the auspices of the firemen, are at Carnegie and when Scottdale's delegation came along in the parade the entire show was out to give them applause. Monongahela City gets the next convention, but the boys say Mr. Pleasant could have had it if they had stuck to the contest, which was among the two towns named and New Kensington.

Three Were Arrested.
Charles Killinger, Ralph Sneger and Peter Timble were arrested yesterday afternoon charged by Albert Hest as stand for the Eagles with breaking into the club rooms on Bridge street and taking a revolver belonging there on the day of the Scottdale picnic. The three were seen in that vicinity and it is believed that the three or thieves thought there was a large amount of money in the club room cash drawer. The three will be given a hearing before Justice of the Peace C. H. Ullery.

Wanted a Dishwasher and general kitchen girl at the New Scottdale House.

Injured By a Fall.
A. B. Fretts, a well known mill worker, while in camp at Cheat Haven fell from a wagon, and alighted on his right elbow, splintering the elbow and making a very serious injury.

Unmuzzled Dogs.
A pair of unmuzzled dogs, one a brown hound that feeds about Bridge street, and the other a smaller brown one that loiters around the neighborhood of the station got into a fight at the railroad crossing yesterday and the smaller one emerged triumphant. Apparently both dogs were bitten, but the larger one swaggered away as if in contempt of botched ordinances.

To Atlantic City.
Quite a number of Scottdale people left over the Pennsylvania railroad for Atlantic City yesterday, among them being Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Webb, Mrs. D. Dehaven, Mrs. Peter Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Teshow and two children and William Ullery. They expect to be absent about two weeks, except the Teshow party who will be home sooner on account of the resumption of the Old Meadow mill.

Tomorrow's Big Game.
The Saturday game of the H. C. Frick Coke Company's Everson Car Shops will be with that other strong Frick team, the United one. It will be played on the Livingston grounds at Everson at 4 o'clock, as the team is mainly made up of Hilde men. Last evening the Car Shops defeated Hecla 17 to 6. Watson and Malac were the Car Shops battery and Yenko and Lushock for Hecla.

The lineup: Car Shops, J. Byrne, cf.; A. Byrne, 2; Shultsky, ss; Tush, rf; Watson, p; Malac, c; King, 3; Kainshy, 1; Dymark, lf.
Hecla: Jomarsick, lf-ss; Yenko, 3-rf; Shultsky, 2; Sharp, 2-ss; Lushock, c; J. Walsh, 1; Thurston, cf; Elias, lf; J. Welsh, rf.

The score by innings:
Car Shops.....0 2 3 0 0 6-17
Hecla.....0 0 0 0 0 0-3
Hits, Car Shops 13; Hecla 3; errors, Car Shops, 2; Hecla, 3.
Chicken Men Met.
The Scottdale Poultry and Poultry Association met at Squire J. C. Steiner's office last evening, and it was reported that crops may be likely obtained in Greensburg for the show here in December. All the committee are to meet Monday evening at Squire Steiner's office. The next regular association meeting will be Thursday evening, August 25.

DIES UNDER INDICTMENT

Aged Mrs. Wardlaw, Held For Sneed Murder, Starves Herself.
New York, Aug. 12.—Virginia Wardlaw is dead at the house of detention in Newark. She was one of three sisters, all over sixty, indicted for the murder of Mrs. Okey Wardlaw Martin Sneed, her niece, on Nov. 29 of last year.

The elderly women had been in a decline for several weeks. She was successful in concealing the prison fare supplied her and succumbed to weakness due to self-enforced starvation. The opinion is expressed that with her denials the case against her sisters will fall.

Always Keep Their Hair as Fascinating as Possible.

Some women are born beautiful; some grow up to be beautiful, and some are clever enough to make themselves beautiful. And thanks to Parisian Sage, which can now be obtained all over America, every woman can have natural hair in abundance, hair as lustrous as the rising sun.

Parisian Sage is without the least vestige of a doubt the most remarkable hair grower, invigorator and beautifier ever compounded. It is so far ahead of all commercial tonics that A. A. Clarke guarantees it to eradicate dandruff, stop itching hair and itching scalp in two weeks, or money back.

MAYOR GAYNOR IS IMPROVING.

Optimistic Reports From Beside of Stricken
Man.

DOCTORS AT ODDS IS RUMOR

Julietine Say Nothing of "Split" But Let Mentioned at First—Lead Now
Said to Be Located in Roof of Mayor's Mouth.

New York, Aug. 12.—In regard to Mayor Gaynor's condition the physicians in attendance gave out the following:

"The complete radiographic examination by Dr. C. D. Caldwell shows definitely that the bullet is lodged in the vault of the pharynx, easily accessible, but it is not considered wise to attempt to remove it at present. The blood examination is also satisfactory."

Mayor Gaynor may be making satisfactory progress, as his attending physicians persistently maintain, but there is an undercurrent of anxiety evidenced that runs contrary to the official bulletin.

His surgeons say that he had a satisfactory night, that he is cheerful and stronger and was resting quietly, more than holding his own against the pistol shot wound inflicted on Tuesday by James J. Gallagher.

As opposed to this attitude of optimism, those who read the last bulletin thoughtfully noted reference to "complete radiographic" examination indicated that it was necessary to take a second set of negatives in order accurately to find the position of the bullet. That an additional set of negatives was taken has been reported, therefore, but the rumor lacked confirmation.

Bullet in Roof of Mouth.

Nothing has been said in the bulletins of the "split bullet" mentioned as indicated in the first pictures; instead, the lead is now said to be lodged in the roof of the mouth. Whether the other shadow as indicated in the first picture is a splinter of bone, none of the physicians would say.

A sample of the patient's blood was examined carefully last evening and pronounced satisfactory, the relation of the white and red blood corpuscles having been found no more normal as to cause no alarm.

Although rumors are said that his physicians are in the midst of a difference, Robert Adams, his secretary, and E. J. Lederer, health commissioner of New York, gave out a statement contradicting the reports of friction among the medical advisers.

The statement does not deny the report specifically, but by implication, as follows:

"The surgeons in attendance on the mayor are Dr. William J. Arlitz, Dr. George E. Broder, Dr. George D. Stewart, Dr. Charles N. Dowd. During their absence on Wednesday afternoon Dr. Charles H. Peck attended the mayor. The mayor's family physician, Dr. John W. Darrah, also attended him. No other surgeon or physicians have at any time been connected with the case. This statement is necessary because of unfounded reports and statements by those pretending to be connected with the mayor's physicians."

STRANGE POWER

Over Rodents Was Possessed by Gaynor's Assistant.

New York, Aug. 12.—Rats were the sole companions of James J. Gallagher, the man who shot Mayor Gaynor. Rats alone cared for him, at least since the death of his wife; in fact, this man had some strange power that brought rats to him just as they went to the piper. The Humm man had to blow a horn to attract rats, but Gallagher made a peculiar noise from deep in his throat.

Such was the information gathered in the sixth division of the apparatus stores on the docks, in which he worked once and in which it is difficult to keep out rats.

Gallagher with other workmen used to handle the boxes and boxes of the rodents running about trying to escape. But all the rats understood Gallagher. Sometimes they were so numerous and so fierce that other workmen ran away. But not Gallagher.

His strange power over them was not understood till one day when a number of hungry rodents had been cornered and showed fight. The men retreated, but Gallagher stuck and began to make a peculiar noise. At once the rats went to him.

His fellow workers looking in upon him saw the rats gather about him with squeals of affection that sounded similar to the noise that Gallagher made. They crept upon him from all sides. He stroked the rodents as he continued the chuckle and they climbed all over him. Gallagher gave no heed to their size or appearance. He cooed them and let them nestle in his arms.

To horrify the men he called them back every noon hour with the same cry.

"They are lovable animals," he often told his companions. "The rats

LIFE OF "BIG BILL" EDWARDS THREATENED BY CRANK'S LETTER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—"Big Bill" Edwards, street cleaning commissioner of New York city, from friends of Mayor Gaynor and hero of the shooting affray on the steamer Kidder Wilhelm der Grosse, is the latest to be threatened that he will meet the same fate as the city's executive. He has received a letter to this effect. Edwards declares that he is used to having his life threatened and that the result of efforts to slay him have been the one in danger. "Big Bill" has his street cleaning force fully organized and when the winter rains and snows come will be prepared to battle with them just as effectively as he did last season.

HARD DIGGING NOWADAYS

Says Writer, As Teddy Is Not in White House—Cant Pay Alimony.

New York, Aug. 12.—Attorneys for Henry Beach Needham, magazine writer, told Justice Pitman in the supreme court in Brooklyn that Needham could not afford to pay $40 a week alimony to his wife, which was ordered some time ago.

Needham's attorneys said that with Colonel Roosevelt out of the White House and forced to make his own living with his pen and ink, magazine writing for others had become so poor that the best Needham could hope to do in the way of alimony was $15 a week. The court may order the imprisonment of the defendant if the argument of counsel fails to create sufficient impression.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 12.—After his body had been cut in two by wheels of a freight car, severing both legs at the thigh and crushing the right arm, Joseph Means, five years old, son of Hannah Means, calmly asked for a drink of water and bade witnesses of the accident send for his parents.

Then he was taken to a hospital, where he died after having been conscious one hour and forty minutes. Railroad men present, who witnessed many fatal accidents, said they had never before seen such nerves of steel as the boy possessed. There was not a tear in the boy's eye at any time.

NO HURRY ABOUT GALLAGHER

Grand Jury Instructed to Await Outcome of Gaynor's Injury.

New York, Aug. 12.—Judge Swagerty of the court of oyer and terminer of New Jersey instructed the Hudson county grand jury not to act on the attempted assassination of Mayor Gaynor for the present.

He said that if Gallagher was indicted for a minor offense it might impede the ends of justice if Mayor Gaynor should succumb to his wounds.

Cruel Mistake.

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 12.—Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Henshaw of Waverly, O., stopping over in Huntington on their honeymoon trip, were taken into custody by the local police. After being subjected to a rigid examination they were released. Their arrest grew out of the fact that photographs of two dangerous criminals had been received by the police and the pair filled the description almost exactly.

Noblesville, Ind., Aug. 12.—James Richardson, colored, aged twenty-three, was arrested in this city on the charge of being implicated in a riot at Newark, O., about a month ago, when a boy detective was lynched by a mob. The arrest was made on the strength of a telegram received from the Newark police.

COVERS 100 MILES ON TRIP

Section of Long Island is Quickly and Thoroughly Covered by the Colonel. Who Asks Scores of Questions. His Opinion About Farm Hands.

Oyster Bay, L. I., Aug. 12.—Colonel Roosevelt, ex-president of the United States, is not satisfied to hold political confabs only. He has wanted for a long time to go out and view at close range the methods of the new scientific school of farming.

At the invitation of Ralph Peters, president of the Long Island railroad, he visited the model establishment that the railroad has set up in order to stimulate interest in an apparently barren section of the island.

The tour of inspection was along the lines of his trip into the Pennsylvania coal region last week, but for a purpose which he did not volunteer to explain.

The colonel covered about 100 miles altogether, heard a good deal of academic farm talk that he grasped with startling rapidity, ate a farm dinner in an unfinished dining room and help push a farm auto that had got stuck.

Well, the colonel went all over this works. He figured out just how much a man would have to spend to settle down on ten acres of Long Island scrub land and start a farm that would support himself and his family. While he was asking questions, Roosevelt sought to find out about the laborers employed on the farms. When he was told that there isn't steady employment all the year around the colonel gave vent to a sentence of his "political philosophy," which stated that the farmers ought to see to it as much as possible that the farm hands are given steady employment. This would do away with a lot of the hobo class that work a few months and lose the rest.

The colonel told Mr. Peters that he approves of the plan that the railroad has adopted in getting folks interested in farm life. So long as the railroads of the country do that sort of things T. R. is with them strong.

PACKING OFFICIAL

Grand Jury Charges Chicago Man With Perjury.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Thomas G. Lee, manager of the dressed beef sales department of Armour & Co., has been indicted for perjury by the federal grand jury. A bench warrant was issued for his arrest.

Lee is charged with making many false statements and denying that prices were fixed and arrangements made regarding each corporation's output into interstate commerce.

Notebooks containing a record of letters dictated by packing officials were destroyed, according to the grand jury report to the judge, after three stenographers, employed by Armour & Co. had testified.

EXPLAINS BALLINGER NOTE

Witness at Gore Hearing Says It Was Only Loan.

Sulphur, Okla., Aug. 12.—Dr. Wright, trial delegate, testifying at the Gore hearing, denied that he had any interest in the McMurray contracts, saying that he had consistently opposed them.

Dr. Wright volunteered an explanation of a note which he said he heard had been photographed and was being used by Senator Gore and Congressman Carter evidently, he said, to leave the impression that he was corruptly associated with Ballinger. He said that when he first went to Washington he needed some money until his salary and expense check came and that he asked Ballinger, whom he knew, where he might borrow it. He said that Ballinger offered to go on his note and that he did so. The note was paid within twenty days.

Census Men "Over Zealous."

Helm, Mont., Aug. 12.—Thomas Dalley and F. C. McDonald, census enumerators of Great Falls, who were indicted on the charge of making false and fictitious returns, appeared in the federal court and entered pleas of guilty. Their action was described as "over zealousness in seeing that none was missed" by counsel. The court imposed a fine of $150 together with a jail sentence of twenty-four hours in each case.

Expert Engineers Say Famous Leaning Structure Must Come Down.

London, Aug. 12.—According to the Rome correspondent of the London Globe expert engineers have recommended to the Italian government that the famous tower of Pisa be torn down and re-erected on a better foundation.

The report of the engineers is supplemental to that they recently made and follows a thorough examination of the foundation of the tower, which is believed to be in danger of falling. The tower was built in 1154. It is of white marble and 158 feet high. The inclination from the top to the base is sixteen feet.

DREXEL LOST IN CLOUDS

London, Aug. 12.—The examination of the remains at Dr. Crippen's residence at Hilldrop Crescent, supposed to be those of Belle Elmore, Crippen's wife, has been concluded. It is understood that the examination revealed the remains to be those of a woman who had undergone an operation.

Bullets Bring Down Four.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—W. J. Meyers shot and killed his wife Grace, his son Ralph, seven years old, and his father-in-law, Frank Boulton, and then killed himself. Meyers attempted to enter his father-in-law's house, but was refused admission.

EXPECT STRIKE AT CONVENTION.

Mineworkers in Special Session at Minneapolis.

ENEMIES TO COMBAT LEWIS

While Convention is Called Ostensibly to Settle Illinois Strike Difficulty, Differences of Factions Will Be Thoroughly Aligned.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 12.—The special national convention of the United Mineworkers of America opened with many offerings of peace by the delegates, but with the apparent determination of the factions following John Walker of Illinois to fight out their differences at any cost. About 1,100 delegates are present.

At a meeting of the Illinois delegates a resolution was adopted which bound the delegation to stand by the demands made at the Peoria convention, "first, last and all the time."

Walker denounced the compromise proposition which was submitted to the Illinois miners by the international executive board and President Lewis. He said the Illinois miners knew their position was right and that they proposed to maintain it.

While the special convention has been called by President Lewis for the ostensible purpose of dealing with the wage difficulties in the various fields in which the union miners are on strike, there is no hiding the fact that the convention will have on its hands internal factional troubles of a serious character.

That an attempt may be made to impeach Lewis is intimated by John H. Walker, leader of the Illinois miners. Mr. Walker's criticism of the attitude and the policy of President Lewis was not softened by subtle phrases and he openly declared his opposition to the administration and its course with regard to the strike in Illinois.

Walker says he is not afraid of a fight on the floor of the convention.

A QUARTER OF A CENTURY BEFORE.

The Storm Within.

The storm was one of the worst that had ever burst from the mountains and swept across the plains. The wind came in wild bursts of tremendous speed. Even in the hills, which were only comparatively such, it blew perhaps 20 miles an hour. The force blasts were laden with fine snow—frozen spindrift from a white ocean of cold. Novels of ice sharper than their prototypes of steel cut the bare flesh of those whom evil fortune kept abroad on such a night, bringing the blood to the freezing skin. The onslaught of the screaming tempest drove the hapless cattle mad with pain and terror. The thick snow compelled them to huddle together at last, and sheltered under their backs, and die in the pitiless hurricane.

Just where the foothills rose themselves in the prairie lay huddled a little town or camp. Every door and window was shut and barricaded against the searching storm.

In one of the poorest and most miserable shanties on the outskirts of the town a woman waited alone. A common kerosene lamp stood on a table before the window, set there as if in signal.

The house, a mere shack which shook and quivered under the tremendous assaults of the storm, and night have been blown down if it had not been buttressed and protected by leaps of snow yet threatening to overwhelm it, contained but one room. In the corner farthest from the door stood a tumbled, frosty bed. A chest of drawers, a kitchen table, a rusty cook stove, a few uncertain chairs of the plainest and cheapest quality, were all the rest of the furniture. A few clothes hung from pegs in the boarded wall. A saddle in one corner, a pickaxe and shovel, a heavy quilt, and a rifle hanging from pegs beneath a shelf sufficiently pointed out the avocations of the owner.

Yet she was a woman who, whatever her outward circumstances, showed no poverty of spirit. She raised up and down the room as if she were a queen, and her narrow confines of her cage. Sometimes, she paused and stopped by the window, to rest her head beneath her hand on the sash and peer eagerly, passionately, out into the falling snow. She could see nothing, and after having stared with intent of despair, she would further mutterings of angry words, she would resume her restless backward and forward march.

Had there been any spectator when she assumed that picturesque position at the window, where the light, however it fell, illuminated the snow, threw her own face and person in high relief, the observer would have been surprised at the coarse and yet not unattractive beauty of her face and figure. She was full of life and deep of soul. Her hair, black and curly, her cheeks were pale of color, her hair black and curly and curly. Her hands, which she clasped and unclasped nervously, were large and reddened by toil, but they were neither refinement nor coarseness in her face. There was a certain quality of will which experience could have detected. Here had been a hard life, and it had made her a hard woman. She was perhaps twenty-five years old, but looked older.

For hours the woman had waited in that lone place. It had been storming badly when she began her vigil, and the violence of the tempest had increased until she feared that no human soul could brave it. That she very much wanted some one to attempt it, that she was keenly, ardently, longed for that, was quite evident. Great in the power of love. From its counterforce of terror, she turned it in the eyes of the ignorant and inexperienced—may stir men and women to mighty deeds. This woman waited the arrival of one who fancied himself a modern Hercules about to release another bound and helpless Andromeda from a devouring monster.

Whether the man who fatuously filled that role—or the boy rather, for he had not reached man's years or estate—would arrive before her husband, was the problem that filled the woman's mind. In view of the blizzard raging who might have wondered whether, in case either of them sought the house, they could find it or reach it alive. If she had stopped to consider that phase of the possibilities, she would have been profoundly glad both ventured and had both wandered on in the night until benton down and manured by the swirls of the storm, so that the searchers, after its violence had abated, might find them from n to death as many another poor fellow was found frozen there after. For while the woman loathed and hated her drunken brute of a husband, yet she had no affection for the foolish young tenderfoot who had wandered out west to spend a summer holiday and had lingered on through the winter, fascinated by her exuberant attractiveness, and flattered by her bold and artful pursuit of him.

She had thought to amuse herself in her dreary, wretched, sordid life by his fresh, frank, open admiration. The woman's drunken husband had cared little at first; but lately, under the stress, suavity and innocency of his companions, he had become fiercely jealous. Then in mad fury he had forbidden the boy the house, and had sworn that he would kill him on sight.

The woman thereupon swiftly made up her mind to break the thrall of her matrimonial bond, and in the young stranger's company or by his agency to leave the country. She neither desired nor intended to be tied to the boy a half dozen years younger than she.

Once in civilization it would be easy to break away from him, she knew. Therefore she had no fear, but with her beauty, her wit, and her courage, with her utter unscrupulousness, she could make her way in the east which she had never seen. And this was the night on which they had agreed to take their departure.

Since her husband's will outbreak of jealousy, she had seen the boy only once. In that surreptitious interview they had concocted their plans. Her husband spent the greater part of the nights, whenever he had any money, in gambling and drinking; at the season, by a lucky chance a short time ago in an all night trial with Fortune, he had won something over $1,000. The bulk of it in hard cash still reposed in the chest of drawers. That, with what the boy could contribute, would provide for the expenses of the journey. She had not it out and hid it up in a little canvas bag. It lay on the table near the lamp.

Fifteen miles south the Union Pacific railroad ran across the continent. It had been her plan to ride thither and take the first train eastward, losing themselves in Chicago, and thence by whatever route pleased them, to make their way to New York. Whether her husband would pursue her or not, she could not tell. His would be without the money, since she meant to take all with her. He would hardly be able to follow her very soon. But if he did, that was a risk she must take.

Engaged in the present, the boy thought nothing at all about the future. The woman's predicament bulked so large to his immature imagination that there was nothing else on the horizon. There was no other horizon than she in fact. And his one desire was to get her away to free her.

And now this storm bade fair to render the whole plan impossible. Understanding his temper she feared that the boy would be frightened by the blizzard. Yet there was more in the boy than she imagined; for "You are going on a longer journey than you planned," he panted, when she had about made up her mind finally that she would not come, the door was thrown open and he stepped into the room. The woman screamed slightly and stepped toward the snow covered, ice fastened figure. The young man forced the door shut, turned and faced her. He tore off his fur cap and threw it on the floor. He stretched out his icy gauntleted hands toward her. To reach the cabin he had been compelled to face the blizzard. His face was white yet bleeding. The woman shrank back from him.

"In this my welcome!" he said in a voice only equalled in spite of his youthful aspect.

"You're so wet and so cold," said the woman. "The horses?"

"They're outside," returned the boy. "But you didn't think of venturing in this blizzard? Why, it's like hell itself, or would be if hell was ever cold."

"I'd risk anything," said the woman, "to get away from him." You won't fail me now?"

"But, my God, girl!" answered the boy with that assumption of superior air which so satisfied his pride. "We'll die in this blizzard."

"No," persisted the woman. "See, the storm comes straight from the north. Our way is due south, we've only to keep it at our backs."

"All right," said the boy cheerily. He turned and stared out of the window. "You've no idea how terrible it is, though."

"I don't care."

"Get ready, then."

"I'm ready," she replied. "See!" She lifted the skirt of her dress and showed him a pair of horseman's boots with a pair of her husband's trousers tucked tightly in them. "It's a good thing he has a small foot," she sneered.

"Curse him!" said the boy. "I'd like to settle with him before we go." "You'll settle with him enough," said the woman cynically. "When you take me away from him."

She turned and took down from one of the pegs a heavy fur overcoat. The boy assisted her to put it on. From a holster hanging on the wall she drew a small silver-mounted 32-caliber revolver.

"I'm ready," she said again. "Let us start, then," cried the boy, stopping forward.

On the instant a whirl of wind disclosed to them that the door had suddenly opened. They turned to face a drunken, infuriated, leering figure. He had on a short, thick fur jacket, which left his hips completely uncovered. A heavy revolver had dangled in his holster. He dragged it out as he spoke and tried it on the boy.

"You're going for a longer journey than you planned!" he panted thickly, as he strove to steady the weapon and cover the other.

The boy was fumbling at the fastenings of his coat. His own revolver was not yet at hand. He was not yet at hand. He was not yet at hand.

"Fumble at 'em, you fool!" cried the man. "Before you get 'em open, I'll shoot you dead. I don't do it now, because I want you to taste death and hell as long as possible before you go into 'em. You thought you'd make a fool out of me, did you, and you, too, you!"

He flung a frightful, mordant word at his wife which stung not less because it was in large measure undeserved, at least so far as the boy was concerned.

"I'll settle with you when I get through with him. Your time's up!" he continued, as the boy at last succeeded in reaching his weapon.

He was gone, that boy, although his face under its white hair than it had been when he entered the cabin, while the other man's, similarly snow covered, was red with rage; and though he was covered and even a drunken man could scarcely miss at such range, he nevertheless drew his own weapon. But before he could raise it there was a sudden movement back of him. The man in the doorway turned sharply.

"What!" he cried to his wife. "You would, you?"

At that instant the boy was conscious of a sudden flash of light and a sharp detonation. The room was filled with noise, a little cloud of smoke blown down on him. Standing with his own pistol but clasped tight in his hand, he saw the man in the doorway reel. The arm that held his weapon dropped to his side. With a convulsive movement he pulled the trigger. The bullet burst from the barrel, while the man sank down on his knees, away a moment, a frightful look in his eyes, and then pitched forward on his face and lay still.

"Good God!" whispered the boy turning to his companion, "you've shot him!"

He stared at the woman, who still clasped the little silver-mounted weapon she had used with such terrible effect.

"It was his life, or your life or mine," was the answer. "I did it for you," she said quickly, seeing a look of horror and repulsion spreading over the face of her companion.

"Yes—yes! I know," he replied; "but—"

"Come, we must get out of here immediately,"

"Of course, of course," whispered the boy nervously. "We can't stay here now."

"Drag him into the room and shut the door!"

The lad hesitated.

"Are you afraid?" sneered the woman, making as if to do so herself.

"Certainly not," was the answer; but the boy nevertheless was afraid—the dead body, with more fear than he had ever felt for any one living. Yet something had to be done and at once.

Forcing himself to the task at last, he stooped down, seized the man by the shoulders, turned him over on his face, and dragged him farther into the room. Then he shut the door. The two started a moment at the prostrate figure.

"He's not dead yet," said the boy slowly.

"No; but he soon will be." The woman stooped over and unbuttoned the man's coat and waistcoat. There! she said, pointing to a ghastly hole in the breast.

"I struck him fair in the breast. Would to God he had been his heart!" she added. "Don't you see that we must go now and quick? Come, we can't delay any longer."

"I'll take the blame on myself if we're caught," said the boy. "It was my fault and you saved my life."

"That's noble of you," returned the woman indifferently, "but we won't be caught."

"Well, then, I'll save your reputation before I go," continued the other quietly.

There were a few tattered books on the shelf. He took one down, tore out the flyleaf, drew a pencil from his pocket, scribbled on it a few words, signed it, held it to the woman to read, laid the leaf down on the body of the dying man, and then turned to the door. He opened it, and the woman followed him out into the night.

The room was very still. Except for the long view, faint, and faltering breathing of the man, there was not a sound within the house.

Death hovered over him the long night through. The morning found him still alive, yet barely breathing. He was trembling on the eternal vorgo later in the day when men seeking him burst into the room. They found the letter of confession still lying where it had been placed. They roved the man sufficiently by stimulants to enable him to speak a pregnant word or two before his lips closed forever.

The confession, the bullet that had killed him the empty revolver, and the man's last words, solemnly attested by those present, were carefully preserved by the leader of them all. They might be useful some day, who knew? For the rest it was evident what had happened. The boy and the woman were gone from the camp. No search was made for them; none was possible. The blizzard had spent itself by that time; but the prairie was covered deep with drifted snow. A period of intense cold supervened. It was hardly within human possibility that the two fugitives could have got safely away. They must be buried somewhere to the southward in the vast drifts. Spring might reveal their fate, it might remain forever a secret. So far as the town of the country was concerned, the tragedy—one of the numberless ones of the frontier—was over. In a day or two it was forgotten.

The Storm Without.

The woman's first thought when she stepped outside the door was that at all hazards they must go back. The wind almost swept her away, only the steady grasp of the boy, better prepared than she for the attack of the storm, enabled her to keep her feet. The presence of that ghastly thing on the floor which was affecting even her iron nerve, prevented their return. Whatever happened they must go on! The door of that shelter was closed to them forever by the dead or dying tenant. She realized however, that their chances of escaping freezing to death in the mad endeavor were as small as to be practically none. Well, fate had forced her into this position. She would follow the path she had chosen, whatever might be at the end of the way.

Speech was well nigh impossible. The boy staggered on past the window, and she followed until the door of the house was reached. Between a great drift and the wall, in a little open space the horses were tied.

The boy was a natural horseman. He had picked out the best two broncos in the camp. If any animals could take them to safety, these could. A yet chilled by the fierce cold, they untied the shivering, reluctant, terrified horses from the wooden pins driven into the chinks between the log walls of the house to which they had been hitched, mounted them, and, threatening their way round the drift started southward on their awful ride. The left hand hand—and hand! death loomed before and on either hand.

Except where the storm was broken by houses, drifts had not yet formed. The wind was too terrific, it swept the level prairie clean. But away from the shelter of the house they got the full force of it. Although they were thickly clad in wool and furs, the pressure of the storm drove their garments against their bodies and soon filled them with icy cold. There was no help for it, no relief from it. They had to bear it. They could only bend their backs to it and keep on, trusting to the endurance of their horses.

The woman judged that it had been about one in the morning, when they had started. The Overland Limited ran through the station at three. No horses that lived could have made that 15 miles in two hours under those conditions. It was more than probable that the man and woman were greatly delayed by the storm, and if they kept going steadily they would be likely to catch it. At any rate when they reached the station, they would find food, fire and shelter.

If their horses did not give out, if they were not turned adrift on foot in the storm and snow, and left to die on until they fell and slept, and froze and died, they would perhaps get away.

More experienced than the boy, all these possibilities were present to her. She did not pray, she could ask nothing of God, but she went warily and helpfully, helping the horse where she could.

As for her companion, he did not give these matters very much consideration. He kept going, toward the south to the railroad station because that was the only thing to be done.

Another, however, rode with him, it was the boy. Before his eyes were ever opened that gray, grisly specter of a human form, the red blood welled from its breast, redder still from the white snow with which he was surrounded. That awful figure beckoned him on. He was younger, fiercer, bolder, than she. He was more foot than innave, she was all knave. He had been his life, and he was before her, but his went back ward to what was behind.

After a long time it seemed to them that the fierceness of the storm was somewhat abated. The wind was certainly falling, but the drifts were steadily rising, and their progress was more difficult every moment for that cause. Their very souls were numb with the awful cold. Still they went forward, slower now, and more slowly ever.

How far they had come, what time it was, where they were, neither he nor she could tell. It seemed to them both that they had been hours on the way. The woman was sure that they must have compassed the greater part of the journey, when her horse suddenly stumbled and fell. Her companion's matchless endurance had at last been exhausted by the terrible struggle of their journey. He lay dying where he fell, and thinking and could do could get him up again. The boy had stopped, of course, when her horse had fallen. He had dismounted and helped her to rise. He had assisted her vain efforts to get her own played out horse on its feet. The two now stood staring at each other in dismay. "You must take my horse," said the boy at last.

The woman nodded. With his assistance she climbed slowly and painfully into the saddle, took the reins from the boy, and started on. Her companion caught hold of the stirrup leather and staggered forward by her side. The going was now infinitely harder for the remaining horse. The woman immediately realized that with this almost dead weight plunging through the deep drifts and dragging heavily at the stirrup leather, the remaining bronco would soon be exhausted.

"She's Gone, Then?" Gapsed the Boy.

She had meant to play fair with him but it could not be. And so for a long time the trio plodded on in this way, the woman nursing herself to a frightful action as best she could. She hesitated to do it. She was reluctant.

But no horse that ever lived could stand such a strain. She knew that it would be a matter of minutes now when the animal she rode on would also fall, and lie when he had fallen like his dead brother back on the trail, and then she and the boy would inevitably perish.

Well, it was his life or hers! The decision was forced upon her. And perhaps after all it was just as well to get rid of them both and have done with it. She reached over, and before the boy realized what was happening she caught his hand, tore his fingers from the saddle stirrup, and thrust him violently backward. Unprepared, unsuspecting, half dazed, he could offer no resistance. He reeled and fell supine in a deep and overwhelming drift. She struck the horse heavily with the whip that hung from the saddle bow, and the animal plunged forward wildly. She knew that she was safe unless he should try to shoot her, for he was too weak and too exhausted to catch her.

The boy's senses were quickened to instant action by her conduct. After the first moment of surprise, he knew at once that she was deliberately abandoning him to die in the snow. A hot rush of blood, in spite of the cold, swept over him. He thrust his hand within his coat and dragged out a weapon. He raised it and trained it on the woman's back, and for the moment his hand did not tremble. Then there rose before him that other ghastly figure. Though he had lived some months on the wild frontier and had seen more than one man killed there, he had never been connected with the murder before, even as an accessory after the fact, and the horror of it was still upon him. He lowered the pistol, though he could easily have shot her dead.

Such treachery on the part of a woman would have killed some men, not so this boy. In that moment he became a man. He saw himself a fool, he determined that he would not also see himself a coward. Clenching his fists and summoning his strength, he followed southward afoot in the woman's wake.

He halted—if that be the word for his progress—with his head down and his body bent lower and lower. He took long rests between the stops. By and by he fell forward on his face. The sensation of delicious rest and drowsiness that swept over him wooed him to lie still and die; but there were still sparks and remnants of manhood and courage in him. He shook off his desire to sleep at last and arose from the snow. He was conscious that he could not crawl forward on his hands and knees, slowly working himself over the snow covered ground, round the drifts like a great animal.

There was no use. Humanity could not stand the strain any longer. One more movement he made, and just as he was about to sink down forever he heard a long deep hollow, mournful sound. He stopped interested, dimly wondering what it could be.

Whatever it was it meant life of some kind. It came from directly in front of him. It nerved him to further effort. Summoning the last vestige of his strength, he advanced a little farther.

He knew what it was now. It was a locomotive.

He lifted his head and saw lights faintly. He divined that it was the station, the train, the Overland Limited! She would get on it and go away! What mattered it?

And what of himself? There was help, there was life! He actually rose to his feet and wavered on. By happy chance the contour of the ground had caused the space between him and the lights to be swept comparatively bare of snow. It was not now difficult walking, yet he staggered like a drunken man. He was not now a fainting man. He was not now a fainting man. He was not now a fainting man.

Ab! the lights were moving before his eyes they danced and flickered. The train was going! He broke into a reeling run hoarse whistles on his frozen lips. Too late!

He stumbled and fell across the car tracks, dimly conscious of the lights, of the departing train. He had just sense enough and strength enough to cry out as he did so. Some one on the station platform heard his voice. Mon came toward him, he was lifted up and carried into a warm room. Something burning yet deliciously relieving was poured down his throat.

"The woman!" he gasped out, looking up in the faces of the station agent and his helper bending over him.

"She took the limited not five minutes ago," said the man staring at him curiously. "The train was two hours and a half late or she'd never have got it."

"She's gone then?" gasped the boy. "Yes."

"Thank God she got away!" he murmured as he lapsed into complete unconsciousness.

There was good stuff in the boy. He was glad the woman had escaped in spite of all. He did not want another human being's life on his hands. (To be Continued.)

No games scheduled balance of week.

Cotton topped, peppy little Getsie "cleared up" for Leisenring by smacking a triple to the seventh with the bases full and turned apparent defeat into victory yesterday afternoon with a thousand frantic fans either yelling with delight or shrieking with disappointment, according to their point of view. For Leisenring it was a spectacular piece of baseball which brought a much sought but apparently hopeless victory to that team.

Regardless of whether Gillen played the ball badly, the fact remained that the hit won the game for Leisenring, but had it only gone for a single, Frank Jones' double, which followed in quick order, would have brought the winning run across. Instead of an extra one that Leisenring did not need, but, for fear the upset fan does not appreciate the fact, it might be repeated that yesterday's game was a great one. It was a real game, with glories, peppy players on each side, fighting to win fairly. This was the second meeting of the two teams since the league began and the last. Davidson already had one scalp dangling at the belt and thirsted for another. For a time it seemed they would get it for Leisenring was wobbling in the early stages. After the second inning Sam Jones settled down and pitched brilliant ball, allowing but one hit in the last seven innings. On the other hand, Sheets pitched a cool, steady game. Only in one inning did Leisenring get to him hard. The remaining session after that he was as much of a puzzle as ever. Sheets had one bad inning and yesterday it was fatal. But the victim must not rest on his laurels. "Toto it is that Leisenring hit him hard but only after chances to retire the side were literally tossed to the winds. Davidson wobbled just one we hit in the early part of the seventh and the speed boys from Leisenring took advantage of it and won. It was a hard game to lose, but Davidson deserves all the honor that goes with a team that fights hard and fair, yet loses.

Leisenring and something like store freight the first two innings. F. Spittler, first up, fanned. Ritchey hit a roller almost over second bag. O'Loughlin made a great throw of the ball but "cuddled" with Westenberg and in the third inning Ritchey was safe, the drive gave for a sin do. Ritchey went to third on Westenberg's smash just Getsie and scored when Westenberg booted Tom Jones' grounder. Sheets fanned and a fast double was completed but Westenberg was nipped off third.

Leisenring got this score back when Sheets, first up, singled and stole, took third on F. Barry's punk bouncer just Getsie and scored when Westenberg booted Tom Jones' grounder. Sheets fanned and a fast double was completed but Westenberg was nipped off third.

The second was a night mare for Leisenring. It looked so bad for a time that Sheets started to warm up. He was nipped in the box it developed later. Sam Jones started the session by handling Ben Spittler four wide on a Trotter followed this with a single. Spittler taking third, Gillen's single nipped Spittler but Decker was nipped at the plate when Bennett tapped O'Loughlin. F. Spittler advanced Gillen and Bennett on his infield out but Ritchey singled, both men getting home before Sweetser could toss Ritchey out going to second.

Sam Jones got a single in the second and then two down and was the only Leisenring man to see the cushioning. Taking the field, Butterworth, nipped Sweetser and Finerty replaced Clark, both in the outfield.

There was no more scoring until the fourth, both teams playing a fond ball. Leisenring tallied in that session through battery misplays. Westenberg singled and stole second, going to third on Jones' wild pitch. He tallied on a wild pitch. Butterworth dusted a single past Ben Spittler but was left at first.

With the score 1 to 2 in Davidson's favor the remaining innings up to the seventh were almost a procession to the plate and back for both sides. In the first of the seventh Davidson got its first hit since the second session, Gillen putting a bludge into right field.

One was down in the seventh for Leisenring when Sheets nipped Buttermore's bouncer badly to first and the runner was safe. Finerty capped a single which was too warm for Ben Spittler and both men were safe.

Umpire, Sheets.
Official scorer, Jones.

Frick League Notes.

The attendance at Leisenring was over a thousand. More than 300 fans from Conneltsville witnessed the struggle.

Umpire Gregg called several strikes on balls several inches above the batter's shoulders. R. Barry and Sheets were the principal sufferers in this respect. Aside from this Gregg worked well. He was absolutely impartial in his decisions.

Brady of Lemont is said to have Mullin of Trotter left at the post when it comes to chronic kicking. But Frank is always good natured.

The game was delayed awaiting the arrival of Tom Jones, Bill Sheets and Ben Spittler. Jones was married at Jacobs Creek yesterday morning and Sheets and Spittler went along to see that Jones got back in time to catch the game. He played brilliant ball although he couldn't hit the ball safe.

Peter Fink watched the bases with an eagle eye. If he missed any play at all it was on Roseblossom at third in the first inning.

Buto, headed by Superintendent Robert Warnock, came to Leisenring 40 strong, in two wagons and a buggy yesterday. Buto is the popular designation of Leisenring No. 2.

Monarch turned out a good crowd to the game and Trotter was represented by the irrepressible Frank Mullin, "Squaw" Frazier, Jollie Joe, Third Baseman Brady, and a host of others. Mullin is a great klipper and kept the crowd in his vicinity roaring all the time.

The Davidson rosters cheered lustily at every opportunity and for a time almost drowned the enthusiastic Leisenring fans. Leisenring cheated the regular after Getsie's smash in the seventh.

Voyda, formerly of Youngstown, is pitching for Lemont and hitting the ball hard as usual.

Patrick was behind the bat again for Lemont. Superintendent Callaghan has had his troubles finding a thoroughly reliable backstop and went back to first principles. Patrick isn't a brilliant catcher but he is a steady, conscientious worker with a good batting eye. His hitting effects any "holding" weakness he might possess.

Guman and Voyda caught but two hits each but Lemont lost. Bitner took advantage of every break that came its way and won.

Buttermore will supplant Frank Jones behind the bat for Leisenring in the next few games. Frank is to take a well earned vacation before school starts.

Frank Jones caught a nice game under difficulties. The first ball pitched caught him on the end of a finger and it troubled him for the rest of the game. In spite of this he was game to the core and stuck in the game.

Lemont made a game finish last evening but the rally was cut off before Bitner's long lead could be overcome.

The Frick league managers will meet at the Smith House this evening. Watch that Morgan team climb. Those boys get nearer the top whether they play or not.

The crowd was the largest ever assembled on the Leisenring grounds. As many people were gathered about the diamond as witnessed the Davidson-Leisenring game in Conneltsville.

Getsie played third last evening like a seasoned ball player. Several of his chances were hard but he got the ball without a miscue and his throws to first were in good time and perfect. It was the little third sacker's day.

When the song sounds for the finish of the season Davidson will be found fighting it out with Leisenring. Mr. Beerhower's boys have the goods and they will produce them. Though Leisenring has a good lead they have to run away race. Morgan is right after them and Davidson will be heard from within the next two weeks.

Slits plays first better than any man that has appeared in the league at Conneltsville. He is sure on thrown balls and he gets away from the bag to avoid the tag. On the instant he has received the ball. On dangerous fault of Bennett of Davidson is that he sometimes stands directly on the bag, while taking a throw, giving the runner no chance to reach the bag and collisions are the result.

Some of the boys have begun to shout: "Lead Morgan off. Pretty husky bunch to atop."

UMPIRE IS SUSTAINED.
Editor Francis C. Richter Says Herwick Was Right at Trotter.

Although no protest was ever filed there was considerable dispute over the decision of Umpire Herwick in the Trotter-Leisenring game when Henson was called out after colliding with O'Loughlin and being touched by Westenberg.

The Trotter fans, and a number of the players, claimed O'Loughlin was guilty of interference with the runner, who should have been permitted to return in safety to second base.

The play was explained in comprehensive detail to Editor Francis C. Richter of "Sporting Life," one of the official scorers of all World's Series games and the highest authority on baseball scoring. Editor Richter's reply was concise and to the point. He said:

"The umpire was right. The runner cannot interfere with a fielder. See Rule 56, Section 7."

Mr. Richter based his opinion on the fact that Henson had three feet on the other side of the base line in which to avoid O'Loughlin, who was about to do this was not exempted from being retired.

"There is a moral in this decision. The Trotter fans were decidedly unwise towards Herwick following this decision. Since it is shown that the umpire can be trusted, the fans think otherwise, it would be a wise thing for the routers at Trotter and every other town in the circuit to cut out the abuse of umpires. Frick league umpires are not infallible; they make mistakes. If they didn't they wouldn't be umpiring in a bush league."

An Expert's Opinion Of Skin Diseases.

A prominent national expert on skin diseases whose name you are familiar with says that in all his scientific experience he has never found so hard a case to conquer as Eczema. Yet he does not hesitate to recommend ZEMO as a most successful remedy for the treatment of Eczema, itching skin diseases, dandruff, pimples, blackheads and all other diseases of the skin and scalp. He says that not only do its curative qualities make it popular but also the fact that it is a clean, liquid remedy for external use. A great improvement over the old style greasy salves and lotions which are not only unpleasant to use but do not destroy the germ life that causes the disease. ZEMO draws the germs to the surface and destroys them, leaving the skin clear and healthy. Can be used freely on infants. Gisham & Company, Conneltsville, and D. C. Eason, Dunbar, will gladly supply those who call with a free sample bottle of ZEMO and a booklet which explains in simple language all about skin diseases and how to cure yourself at home with ZEMO.
